

How can I find international students for online Quran teaching?

To find international students for Online Quran Classes, try connecting with communities where there's a demand for Quran education. Look for online forums, social media groups, or even WhatsApp communities focused on Islamic studies or Muslim expat families. You can also reach out to local mosques or Islamic centers abroad and ask if they know families interested in virtual learning options.

Another good approach is to use simple ads on platforms like Facebook or Instagram targeting Muslim-majority countries or areas with large Muslim communities. Be clear about what you're offering in your Online Quran Classes—whether it's tajweed, memorization, or beginner lessons—and keep your tone friendly and approachable.

What should be the syllabus of kids in a small Quran centre?

For kids at a small Quran centre, the syllabus should be simple and engaging. Start with teaching basic Arabic letters and their pronunciation (Qaida Noorania or similar), then move on to helping them read the Quran fluently. Alongside this, include short surahs for memorization, like Surah Al-Fatiha and the last ten surahs, which are often recited in prayers. Add a bit of Tajweed rules when they're ready so they can read with proper pronunciation.
