What are the most important things to look out for when choosing a news source

Tech flow alarms U.S. companies

WASHINGTON

Trump's efforts to keep China from dominance
could backfire, they say

BY ANA DRAGAN
AND DAVID MCCABE

The Trump administration's push to prevent China from dominating the market for advanced technologies has put it on a collision course with the same American companies it wants to protect.

Companies that specialize in microchips, artificial intelligence, biotechnology and other industries have grown increasingly alarmed by the administration's efforts to restrict the flow of technology to China, saying it could drain expertise, research and revenue from the United States, ultimately eroding American advantage.

The restrictions, which have been seen as necessary to protect U.S. national security, have taken on new urgency as the U.S. Commerce Department considers adopting a sweeping program that would allow the United States to block transactions between American companies and Chinese counterparts. Those rules, on top of new restrictions on Chinese investments in the United States and proposed measures that would prevent American companies from exporting certain products to
